General Information

Overview

In this capstone research unit, you will complete work initiated in Research Project for Health Professionals 1. You will further your critical thinking and analytical skills through the completion of your research project which will advance your level of knowledge in a specialised area related to health. You will need to evaluate and synthesise your research findings within the context of health literature to identify future opportunities to extend health research. In addition, you will be required to communicate your research findings in a professional manner and identify the clinical relevance of these outcomes to your discipline.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from Student Feedback

Students highlighted the value of clearly worded and timely responses to queries regarding research tasks.

Recommendation

It is recommended that both teaching staff and research supervisors associated with this unit continue to respond to student communications with clear response and in a timely manner.

Feedback

Expectations regarding research engagement, delegation of tasks, and group cohesion should be clearly and regularly communicated and monitored.

Recommendation

It is recommended that the teaching staff clearly communicate primary research tasks expected throughout the course of the unit and revisit the same communications regularly to monitor group engagement, progress, and cohesion. Teaching staff may also consider communicating with research supervisors to monitor group engagement, progress, and cohesion during supervised research tasks.
