General Information

Overview

In this unit, you will study the regional anatomy and physiology of the musculoskeletal, cardiovascular, nervous, lymphatic, respiratory and digestive human body systems. You will apply this knowledge in laboratory sessions using anatomical models and plastinates through a series of practical exercises. In addition, you will gain an appreciation of the integrative nature of anatomy and physiology of the human body with special emphasis on the study of the head and neck, thorax, abdomen, back and upper limbs.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from Student feedback and staff reflection

Model photographs are a useful resource in preparation for the laboratory practicals

Recommendation

Encourage students to label the model photographs prior to attending laboratory practicals to reinforce their knowledge.

Feedback from Student feedback

Laboratory practicals allow a better understanding of features of the human body

Recommendation

Continue to deliver a weekly practical component which moves the student from a conceptual approach to a more hands on approach.

Use anatomical model photographs in online quizzes

Recommendation

Include more questions with anatomical model photographs in the bank of questions used for graded online quizzes.
