General Information

Overview

Upon successful completion of this unit, you will be able to describe the structural levels of organisation within the body, use anatomical terminology to describe the relative location of structures in the body, and explain the role and general features of homeostasis in the body. You will also gain an understanding of the anatomy and physiology of the integumentary, skeletal, muscular, nervous, endocrine, cardiovascular, lymphatic and immune, respiratory, digestive, urinary, and reproductive human body systems. Your knowledge and skills will be developed through a series of coursework exercises.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from SUTE

Feedback

Feedback indicated that the volume of content and length of quiz questions could make completion within the allocated time challenging.

Recommendation

Remind students to engage consistently with weekly learning materials and assessment preparation resources throughout the term to support success in online quizzes and remind students they should plan to dedicate approximately 12.5 hours per week to study and learning activities associated with this unit. Review unit content, assessment design, and learning activities so they continue to support student learning and achievement of unit learning outcomes.

Feedback from SUTE

Feedback

Feedback highlighted uncertainty regarding the depth of knowledge and understanding expected for assessment tasks.

Recommendation

Encourage students to focus on understanding and applying key anatomy and physiology concepts, rather than relying solely on memorisation.

Feedback from SUTE

Feedback

Feedback highlighted the value of the supportive, approachable, and engaging teaching team this term. Further, the interactive learning activities supported engagement, active learning, and reinforcement of key concepts.

Recommendation

The teaching team will continue to foster a supportive learning environment and provide accessible opportunities for students to engage with staff throughout the term. Staff will endeavor to continue to facilitate interactive learning activities to support active learning and knowledge consolidation.

Feedback from SUTE

Feedback

Feedback indicated a desire for greater opportunities for discussion and application of content during tutorial sessions.

Recommendation

Weekly key concepts will continue to be delivered during tutorials. Students will be encouraged to actively participate in tutorials and engage with opportunities to discuss, apply, and extend their understanding of key anatomy and physiology concepts.
