General Information

Overview

This unit explores the critical role of ethics and governance in the sports industry, equipping you to become a responsible leader in sports organisations. You will examine core ethical frameworks, including utilitarianism and virtue ethics, and their application to real-world challenges such as doping, match-fixing, governance issues, and cultural inclusivity. The unit emphasizes the importance of cultural safety and cross-cultural competence, enabling you to lead inclusively and navigate ethical challenges in diverse, multicultural sports environments. Through case studies and practical examples, you will develop the ability to identify and address ethical blind spots, foster accountability, and navigate complex governance structures with cultural sensitivity. By building a strong foundation in ethical decision-making and leadership, this unit prepares you to tackle the unique challenges faced by modern sports organisations. You will gain essential skills in ethical judgment, stakeholder engagement, organisational governance, and cross-cultural leadership. These competencies will enable you to promote integrity, transparency, and inclusivity across diverse sports settings, making this unit invaluable for aspiring leaders in sports management.
