General Information

Overview

Accurate assessment of cardiac function requires comprehensive knowledge of anatomy, embryology, and physiology of the heart, lungs and surrounding structures. You will develop familiarity with the spatial relationship of thoracic structures and the heart. This unit exposes you to data acquired from multiple imaging modalities, including angiography, electrocardiograms (ECG), and echocardiography. You will explore normal ECG complexes, learn how a standard 12-lead ECG is generated, and learn to competently perform a standard 12-lead ECG. Attendance at a residential school is a requirement of this unit.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from Student Unit and Teaching Evaluation

Feedback

Students noted that the lecture recordings were overly dense and lengthy, making it difficult to absorb and retain all the information effectively.

Recommendation

Lecture content will be reviewed and redeveloped where required. The length of each lecture will be also be reconsidered and segmented where necessary to improve content retention and accessibility.

Feedback

Students noted that the lecture notes could benefit from more content matching the lecture recording.

Recommendation

The lecture slides are intentionally designed to foster active learning and discourage rote memorization, ensuring students engage critically with the material rather than simply replicating content in their assessments. However, the slides will be reviewed to identify opportunities for improvement and to better cater to diverse learning preferences.

Feedback from Residential school feedback

Feedback

Students appreciated the group activities during the residential school and expressed a desire for more opportunities to participate in group activities to connect with their peers.

Recommendation

More group-based activities will be incorporated into next year's residential school delivery to encourage students to connect with and get to know their classmates.
