General Information

Overview

This capstone unit aims to facilitate your transition to graduate midwifery practice by consolidating the integrated knowledge, clinical capabilities, and professional values cultivated throughout the program. You will engage in in-depth analysis of the scope and responsibilities of the graduate midwife, with a focus on autonomous decision-making, clinical leadership, advocacy, and ethical accountability within diverse maternity care contexts. Drawing upon contemporary research and theoretical frameworks, you will critically appraise the evidence base underpinning safe, woman-centred, and culturally responsive care. Emphasis will be placed on evaluating midwifery strategies that promote informed decision-making through advanced communication, interprofessional collaboration, and adaptive responsiveness to the individual needs of women and families. The unit interrogates the structural, interpersonal, and emotional dimensions of entering the profession, equipping you to navigate organisational systems, address multifaceted practice challenges, and foster resilience and sustainability. Through reflective inquiry and strategic career planning, you will articulate your professional identity, evaluate pathways for lifelong learning, and position yourself as an emerging leader committed to advancing midwifery practice through innovation and transformative care.
