General Information

Overview

This unit creates the foundations for an understanding of physics as it applies to our world around us, our bodies and our clinical environments. You will learn how to explain observed phenomena, predict changing behaviour and communicate using science conventions. You will apply problem-solving skills and knowledge of physics to find reasonable solutions to both word- and numerical-based situations.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from PASS Leaders Informal student feedback

Weekly Peer Assisted Study Sessions (PASS) were well-utilised and positively received by students.

Recommendation

Investigate potential of maintaining the availability of PASS in future iterations to enhance academic support.

Feedback from Informal student feedback Unit Coordinator PASS Leaders

Feedback

Students may benefit from more varied and updated learning resources to complement existing materials and support diverse learning preferences.

Recommendation

Explore opportunities to enhance the resource set by updating existing content and adding alternative formats and interactive elements to enrich learning and sustain student engagement.
