General Information

Overview

Consumption is a universal phenomenon of human society, and understanding consumer behaviour is fundamentally critical to marketers and policymakers. This unit explores the science of consumer behaviour, an interdisciplinary field that integrates knowledge and discovery from marketing, psychology, anthropology, sociology, demography, and economics. In this unit you will examine models and frameworks of consumer decision making, as well as the impacts of internal and external factors on thoughts, feelings, and actions of consumers. Furthermore, you will learn to implement consumer behaviour principles to facilitate the development of successful marketing campaigns.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Positive student evaluation/comment about clear unit requirements, useful learning materials, and staff's good practice in encouraging students to interact.

Recommendation

The teaching staff in the future offerings of this unit will be encouraged to keep providing students clear unit requirements, keep utilising high-quality learning resources that benefit students in their consolidation of consumer behaviour relevant concepts or theories, and keep encouraging students to interact among themselves and with teaching staff during the learning and teaching related activities.

Feedback from Student feedback and staff self-reflection.

Feedback

There is a need to make improvement on this unit, particularly in terms of providing useful assessment feedback so that students can learn from their assessments and gain beneficial knowledge/skills from the feedback.

Recommendation

The teaching staff in the future offerings of this unit will be encouraged to pay attention to the quality of assessment feedback during the assessment marking/moderation process, and ensure the assessment feedback is educational as well as can enhance students' knowledge/skills.
