General Information

Overview

This unit will help you make the connection between science and safety so that you will think scientifically to promote evidence-based safety practice. You will be introduced to the science that explains how hazards behave, the concept of energy conversion and how hazards cause harm. Management of health and safety risk is discussed from an evidence-informed perspective. Case studies will be used to assist you in developing an appreciation of the linkages between the causation of harm and fundamental theories of physics, chemistry, physiology and social sciences.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from Personal reflection

Feedback

Students struggle with timely submission of Assessment Item 2.

Recommendation

Consider the timing of the video based assessment item (Assessment Item 2) to give students more time to explore their submission options well before the video assessment is due.

Feedback from Student satisfaction scores.

Feedback

Students seek to understand how the learning materials relate to the degree they are undertaking.

Recommendation

Although most students enrolled in this unit are studying towards an associate degree or bachelor's degree in occupational health and safety, consider emphasising the real-world benefits of comprehending the behaviour of hazards, and other topics focused on this unit of study.
