General Information

Overview

This unit builds on your knowledge of anatomy from ORAL11004 Oral Anatomy 1 and supports your study of oral pathology in ORAL11003 Introduction to Oral Disease. In the first half of this unit you will continue the study of anatomy and physiology of the head, neck and oral cavity with an emphasis of the clinical applications of this knowledge. In the second half of this unit you will study embryology and microscopic anatomy of structures within the oral cavity. With this unit you will develop the foundation knowledge required to administer local anaesthesia and conduct an extra-oral and intra-oral examination in oral health therapy practice.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from In Class

Students reported that the practical anatomy sessions were valuable and enjoyable, giving them ample time to complete all workbook activities. They particularly appreciated simulating local anesthesia on the manikin, and engaging in drawing exercises on the whiteboard.

Recommendation

It is recommended the practical anatomy sessions continue in small groups.

Feedback from In Class

Students reported that they did not receive useful feedback on their practical anatomy test and first In Class written test.

Recommendation

It is recommended the assessment feedback process be reviewed.

Feedback from In Class

Feedback

Students reported feeling overwhelmed by the large amount of content and they felt it was difficult to discern what to focus on and what was important.

Recommendation

It is recommended the content and delivery of the unit be reviewed.
