General Information

Overview

Public Health Practice in the Cross-Cultural Community will develop the skills and knowledge necessary to effectively work in a cross-cultural context as a Public Health practitioner. These relate to developing effective working relationships with colleagues in an organisation or community, developing partnerships that promote the co-generation of knowledge within these organisations of communities, and to be able to effectively co-plan and evaluate your own learning. The unit will prepare you to successfully work in real Public Health contexts in effective partnership with communities, organisations, and other stakeholders.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from Direct feedback from students

Feedback

Students would like more direction in selecting a case study topic.

Recommendation

More explicit suggested topics should be provided that students can choose from to overcome the problem of less than ideal choices that do not allow for the assessment requirements to be thoroughly addressed.
