General Information

Overview

This unit will enable you to conduct an independent research inquiry into a specific topic relating to your discipline with the guidance of an allocated supervisor. You will complete a comprehensive review of previous scholarly work relating to your research topic and develop well-articulated research questions. Your research approach, methods and instrumentation of data collection will be determined and finalised in this unit. At the end of this unit, you will develop and present a rigorous project plan that you will execute in the subsequent unit: Research Project 2 (PPMP20016).

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses
Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from End of term student evaluation

Students should be given the discretion to choose their own research topics to better align with their career goals.

Recommendation
Allow students to propose new research topics, subject to availability of supervisors, while offering a range of readily available topics.

Feedback from Unit Coordinator

Feedback
The use of Microsoft Teams was effective in facilitating two-way real time communications between students and faculty.

Recommendation
Maintain the use of Microsoft Teams as a main communication channel in future offerings.
