General Information

Overview

The human brain is a marvelous and complex organ that allows us to perceive the environment, plan courses of action, and engage in adaptive behaviours. Most of the time, these processes are carried out smoothly and efficiently allowing us to function optimally. However, there are times and circumstances where the brain does not operate as it should. In this unit you will examine mental health disorders which frequently have significant adverse impacts. Mental illness will be explored in the context of major diagnostic systems and treatment models. Using a bio-psycho-social approach, you will explore the aetiology and course of psychopathology and consider evidence-based treatments used to facilitate recovery.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from Student feedback

Some of the quiz questions / response options could be clearer.

Recommendation

Review and revise quiz items that are unclear and engage in peer review of quiz questions to ensure clarity and relevance to content in the unit.

Feedback from Student email

Feedback

Positive comments regarding compassion and empathy extended towards people with psychopathology in an informal manner during group discussions.

Recommendation

Formally include discussion of empathy and compassion for people with psychopathology into early lectures.
