General Information

Overview

This advanced level unit introduces you to the practices and principles of Human Factors and examines the ways that humans function in complex socio-technical environments and organisational safety systems. This unit discusses the core principles of physical, cognitive, organisational and environmental ergonomics and provides the foundational knowledge required for the discipline of Human Factors. You will learn and apply knowledge in the area of anthropometric variation of the human body to end-user design enhancements as well as discussing concepts of job design in relation to psychological considerations including mental workloads, fatigue management, teamwork and job-fit concepts.

Previous Student Feedback

Feedback, Recommendations and Responses

Every unit is reviewed for enhancement each year. At the most recent review, the following staff and student feedback items were identified and recommendations were made.

Feedback from SUTE Feedback

Feedback

Students reported struggling with the content of this unit this term due to the short time frame to learn complex theories and practical tools.

Recommendation

It is recommended to review the content of this unit before the next offering. This will also need to take into consideration the new cohort of international students undertaking the unit as an elective.

Feedback from Unsolicited Student Feedback

Feedback

International students reported struggling with the very practical assessment tools in this unit.

Recommendation

It is recommended to review the need for the practical human factors tools used for two of the three assessment tasks in this unit.

Feedback

Students felt that the unit was well put together.

Recommendation

It is recommended to keep the format of the way the unit is delivered. However, this may change if the practical assessment tasks are changed as there may be less focus on teaching these tools.
