General Information

Overview

This unit introduces you to the complexity, richness, diversity, and continuing development of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples' context and culture. You will learn how First Nations' perspectives deepen and enrich the lives of our nation and communities. You will be introduced to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander ways of knowing and being, emphasising their profound connection with land and country and the storylines that flow from them. You will compare First Nations' views on time, identity, individuality, and collective responsibility and gain an appreciation for the resilience of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples. You will also explore the intergenerational impact of colonisation, dispossession and displacement and the forced separation of children from their families on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and communities. You will examine the role social workers played in these historical events and reflect on the implications for contemporary social work practice with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people today. In accordance with the Australian Association of Social Workers (AASW) Code of Ethics (2020), you will learn how to interact in a culturally safe and appropriate manner that decolonises practice for forging collaborative relationships and partnerships with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, countering ongoing discrimination and oppressive practices and fostering reconciliation.
